This document describes a project specification that you should follow in the project. The idea is to emulate a real-life situation where you get a specification from a customer. As it typically is in real life, not everything is specified in detail. You have the freedom to improvise a bit (for example, if you find better images, or better product descriptions), but you should stay within the general theme. Create this on your own – imagine an artificial address. Preferably a real place on this planet, a real address. But avoid addresses pointing to private houses. Better to use addresses of shopping centers, etc.
